

Passengers Lay Disaster to Lack of Searchlights

HEARD MEN'S CRIES OUT OF DARKNESS AS THE S-5 SANK

Eye Witnesses on City of Rome Laud Captain; Life Boats Quickly Lowered in Effort to Rescue Submarine Men

Lack of searchlights on the steamship City of Rome was blamed by passengers on the ship for the disaster in Long Island Sound that sent the submarine S-51 with 33 men to their death.

The passengers, interviewed upon their arrival at the Hoeuse Tunnel docks in Charlestown yesterday afternoon, expressed the opinion that if the City of Rome had its searchlight in operation, the submarine would have been seen in time to avert the collision.

It was very dark at the time of the collision, said George Brown of Alabama, third-year student at Harvard, one of the crewmembers on the vessel. "The Rome had no searchlights going and it must have been impossible for the submarine to see her coming. The moon was just dipping out of sight at the time."

HEARD VICTIMS' CRIES

"I was sitting on deck, talking to a girl, when the Rome and submarine crashed. The whole ship shook and at first I thought we had struck a rock. In a moment I realized the improbability of there being any rocks large enough in that vicinity to cause trouble."

"I ran to the railing and looked over. I could faintly make out the lines of the sub as she went down. I could hear cries from the water. Then then the captain of the ship and other officers ran along the deck, assuring passengers we were in no danger."

"In a few minutes three sailors were pulled up over the side. I talked to him, one of them. He told me he was repairing some radio apparatus when the crash came. He said he was swept out of the coming lower into the water. While struggling in the water, he said, he felt a hand on his shoulder, but before he could turn around and give any assistance the other person in the water was out of sight."

WOMEN IN HYSTERICS

"Lila told me there were 35 men on the ship, three of the crew of 42 having been on leave when the submarine started its trip. "He also told me he could see nothing in the water for some time, the Rome having no searchlights showing."

C. H. Trunkham of No. 12 Forest street, Medford, another passenger, corroborated Brown's assertion that no searchlight was in operation at the time of the collision. "I was in my cabin at the time. I ran on deck. It was very dark and I could see no lights. There was no panic, although one woman did go into hysterics and had to be quieted. We could hear cries from men in the water."

"There were no doctors on board, so far as I could learn, on a Harvard medical student and a girl whom I understood to be a nurse rendered first aid to the three sailors when they were brought on deck." The student, it was later learned, was Frank Easley of Dalton, Ga. The identity of the nurse was not established.

TIBUTE TO CAPTAIN

In the opinion of other passengers, Captain J. H. Diehl of Everett did everything in his power not only to avoid the accident but to alleviate conditions following the crash with the submarine S-51.

This is brought out in an interview with H. S. Nelson, No. 9 State street, Boston, who said he was all but thrown from his berth by the impact of the blow.

"I rushed to the deck just in time to see the swirl of water beneath the bow of the City of Rome," Mr. Nelson said. "I saw three men fighting in the water and almost at once they were guided by the dull gleam of illuminated life buoys. The buoys were added to by life boats, which were necessary."

"The vessel stood by for over an hour and a half. I believe that the captain's decision to move was prompted by the survivors' statement that there was no light from the submarine's occupants coming to the surface," he said.

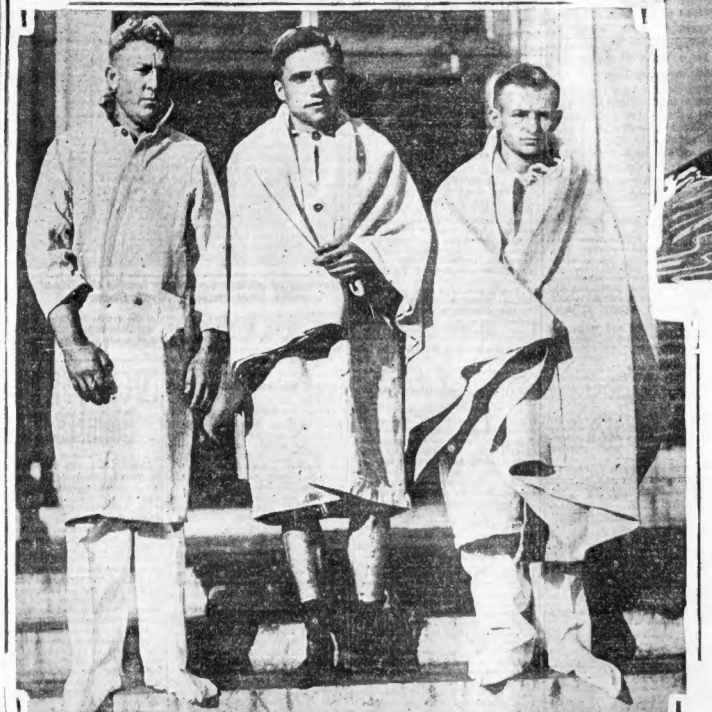

According to C. H. Trunkham of No. 12 Forest street, Medford, the submarine never moved its own length after being struck. It was his opinion that the undersized boat was apparently crossing in front of the bigger vessel.

SAW STRUGGLING MEN

The Misses Marie Roper and Lora Smith, both of Plain, were on the forward deck. They said they thought they had seen the ill-fated submarine moving toward the port side of the steamship. A few minutes later, they said, a terrific blow all but threw them to the deck. They were then under the impression that the navy vessel attempted to cross the bow of the passenger boat.

The women told a dramatic tale of activities which followed the realization that an accident had occurred. A gleam of light from the phosphorescent coated life preservers in the water was their first faint hope for the three men they saw struggling to what they believe

Washington, Sept. 26.—Twin boys who enlisted in the navy on the same day and have always served together are among the men missing aboard the sunken submarine S-51.

HOPE FOR CREW OF LOST 'SUB' IS ABANDONED

Believe That Few Survived After S-51 and City of Rome Crashed

Officials in Boston, interviewed on Sept. 26, believed that few survivors of the S-51 were left behind, thus crushing the hope of their brother sailors.

Four men were to have been assigned to duty on the twenty-four-hour availability test of the "sub" were left behind, thus crushing the hope of their brother sailors.

TO RAISE SUB TODAY

Then the raised and will be lifted off and the men, if alive, will be taken out. The Scott Wrecking Company was working on this project last night but it was feared success would not come before today.

While submarine officers held out high hope that the thirty-three officers and men trapped in the metal shell 125 feet below the surface of the sea, had time to close the watertight compartments and probably were alive, the enlisted men with submarine experience were just as pessimistic.

Sea water coming in contact with the powerful batteries needed in operating the submarine electrical mechanism, generated deadly chlorine gas, in the fumes of which no human can live more than a few minutes.

In the fleet of rescue boats were the submarines S-1, S-4, S-10, S-51 and S-52 out of New London, and equipped with divers and lateral apparatus; the submarine salvage ship Falcon from New York with divers, pumps, air compressors and decompression chambers; the New London submarine station ship Cheyenne; the U. S. submarine tender Camden, flagship of Rear Admiral H. H. Christy of New London; the destroyer Putnam from Newport; a score of private craft and sea planes riding the swell of the waves. The stricken submarine was located shortly before noon at a point

SEARCHLIGHT FAILED, SAYS SHIP CAPTAIN

Shone a Moment, Then Went Out; but He Thinks He Saved All in Water

"From somewhere off our starboard bow a light suddenly flashed. It was that of a rapidly moving craft. I whistled several times, yet her speed did not diminish. And then I telegraphed below for full speed astern. But it was too late. Came the awful crash and doom for most of those aboard the submarine."

In those few words Captain John H. Diehl, master of the Ocean Steamship company's steamer City of Rome, summarized the tragedy on the high seas which sent 34 of the navy's picked submarine men to their death.

It all happened within the space of a very few minutes. In fact one might gather from the captain's story that mere seconds elapsed. The master of the coastwise liner said his ship had a defective searchlight, a searchlight that ceased functioning almost the minute it was turned on and that when it was on there were three men in the water, who are today at the Naval Hospital in Chelsea.

CLUNG TO RING BUOYS

As to whether there were others who managed to get out of the stricken craft and to the surface of the water could not be definitely learned. Captain Diehl doesn't believe there were any other members of the S-51's crew in the water after the crash. He believes the three men his ship saved are all who lived through the impact.

SEARCHED AN HOUR

The City of Rome made her berth in Boston exactly one-hour late. Thus it would seem Captain Diehl cruised about in the vicinity of the crash for an hour. And in that hour, aided by the ship's light and the small lights from the steamer's electric system, he sought to locate any others who might have escaped the fate of the ship. But to no avail, and then he started for Boston.

It was about 10:25 that night, said Captain Diehl to the Sunday Advertiser, "when there suddenly appeared a light off our starboard bow. It was bearing across our path and going apparently at full speed. I soon discovered it to be a submarine and I felt they surely must see us and would take care of themselves."

LIFE BOATS MANNEED

"For a minute I feared he'd be dragged down, but somehow he seemed to get away and come toward us. Later I learned he had caught his legs in the antennas and had a narrow escape. Immediately I called all hands to their stations. Life boats were manned and officers went to the rail with lighted ring buoys which they cast overboard in the direction of the men who were swimming in the water. Soon we could see the men and their life boats and apparently safe."

"By that time our small boat was alongside them. I was aboard within minutes from the time of the crash. They were taken aboard and the boat came alongside, then we cruised for an hour, but found no more."

"Did you see your searchlight?" Captain Diehl was asked. "Only a minute or two. It failed us. I think there was too much power turned on her suddenly," replied the master of the City of Rome.

"Just what where on the submarine was the light you could see?"

"I couldn't say where it was. All I can say is that I saw the light suddenly and then it all happened."

Terrific Struggle in Seething Waters Told by Kile, Geler, Lira

One hour. It was only three minutes after the crash, in my opinion, when the S-51 went down.

"The last thing I remember, Lieutenant Johnson was pleading for someone on the floor to throw him a life preserver."

"All in all, not more than 12 of the men came up when I went out. The rest were in the engine room, and I am pretty sure, because I saw them, that they were in the water 25 minutes after the ship went down."

SEA DISASTER CASTS TRAGEDY PALLOVER E.

Two Families of Victims Were Planning for Brief Trip Home

A slender casket of steel, resting more than a hundred feet below the ocean level, still contains the bodies of New England youths whose love of the sea led them to serve in the United States Navy.

The three survivors of the S-51 can shed no light on their comrades' deaths. Navy tradition leaves the assumption that those who perished in the ill-fated voyage died as heroes.

The shadow of the tragedy fell over New England as the Navy Department gave out the home addresses of those who perished.

The family of Kenneth A. E. Armstrong, 121 East Cambridge street, Cambridge, listed as a victim, were busy with plans for his brief trip home before when reports stunned them with news of the disaster.

TWO BROTHERS IN SERVICE.
Another victim, whose homecoming was awaited with eagerness, was Frank C. Wiseman, 25, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Wiseman of Na. 128 West Third street, Boston. Wiseman, a torpedo man on the sunken submarine, had been in the Navy some years.

He has two brothers also in the service. One, Fred, is on duty with the U. S. Coast Guard. The other, James, is attached to the U. S. S. Fish. They both are in an engineer for the Boston Evening Herald.

Assigned to the S-51 in June was Augustus A. Smith, torpedo man first class, of 223 Spring street, Newport, R. I. He left his bride of a year for duty. They have a son now three months old. Smith was serving his third enlistment and had recently graduated from the torpedo school.

Stephen H. Triffitt of Pawtucket, R. I., had been aboard the S-51 just seven days before the crash. Triffitt was unmarried and had served seven years in the Navy. He expected to visit his home soon on furlough.

WIDOW MOURNS VICTIM.
A widow today mourns Allen C. E. Greiner, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Greiner, of 21 Summer street, Gloucester. The first son was married in June, 1924. He was 21 and was assigned to the submarine service from Oakdale, Cal.

Walter H. Lawton's wife had followed him about on his various tours of duty from his home in Weymouth at 148 State street. A sister also survives him.

Youngest in years and point of service was Joseph Milt of Gloucester. He had served continuously with the submarine service since 1916. He leaves, besides his wife, his parents and two brothers and two sisters.

TO MEET AN INVITEES.
A former resident of Newport and father of two children was lost when it was reported that Chief Torpedoman Valentine Hiltbold was missing. Hiltbold had recently obtained a divorce and was awarded the custody of his two sons, aged 8 and 5. The children now with friends in Rochester.

John J. Kelley, transferred from the S-51 last month ago, was shocked at the news of the disaster. He plans to meet the three survivors. Kelley is now attached to the S-48 and plans to be married in October. He was busy working on the new home at 123 West Third street when the news of the accident.

NEW BEDFORD SURVIVOR
Boston Girl's Husband
New Bedford, Sept. 26.—Alfred Geir, 27, saved from the S-51 after the submarine was rammed by the USS Oregon, was married Thanksgiving Day last year to a Boston girl. His parents, two sisters and two brothers live in this city.

He was away to sea when he was 17. He enlisted in the navy in 1918 and is now doing his "third cruise."

VICTIM HAD WIFE
He'd Be Home Today
Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 26.—Stephen H. Triffitt of this city, who was assigned to the S-51, had his wife and mother yesterday. He would be home on furlough today. He is single and has been in the navy for about seven years. He was transferred from the Newport torpedo station to the ill-fated submarine three days ago.

WILBUR HOPES MANY MAY BE FOUND ALIVE
Washington, Sept. 26.—A naval court of inquiry will be appointed shortly to fix responsibility for the sinking of the submarine S-51, with probable loss of 31 officers and men. Sec. Wilbur announced today. After going to the White House to acquaint President Coolidge with details of the disaster, Sec. Wilbur expressed hope that many of the crew might be taken alive from the stricken craft. This hope was heightened by the fact that three survivors were members of the engine room force, indicating the S-51 did not break open when rammed, he said.

SUIT IS FILED BY LYNN GIRL

She Claims G. N. Mendelson
Proposed After She Consented
Him on Wife's Death

THEN BROKE ENGAGEMENT

Defendant Was Willing Big Estate by Heiress of Really Owner

Thirty thousand dollars is the price that Gabriel N. Mendelson of Lynn, wealthy real estate owner, is asked to pay Miss Jean Kornfeldt as her price for her love. Suit for an alleged breach of promise was filed yesterday in Lynn by Miss Kornfeldt.

According to Miss Kornfeldt, she consented to Mendelson after the death of his wife about three years ago and later he is said to have proposed marriage. Miss Kornfeldt was a friend of Mrs. Mendelson, who inherited the estate of her multimillionaire father, Josiah Grossman, Lynn real estate owner. Upon her death, Mrs. Mendelson left her fortune to her husband, and Miss Kornfeldt wants $25,000 of it.

It is claimed that a date for the wedding of Miss Kornfeldt and Mendelson had been set and the bride-to-be had spent $2,000 on a trousseau when Mendelson informed her there would be no wedding.

OSTED TEACHER TO GET COURT HEARING

Rockland, Sept. 26.—Arguments to show why she should not be dismissed as superintendent of Rockland schools will be heard Tuesday in Superior Court, Boston, by attorneys for Oliver H. Toothaker. The hearing will be before George R. Jones, of Boston, as master.

The Rockland schools were opened Sept. 8 under the direction of the school committee. Many of the teachers have resigned, and the committee has filled their places.

LANDSLIDE SWEEPS
DOWN MT. HUTCHINS

Concord, N. H., Sept. 26.—A landslide, the third in six years, occurred recently on Mount Hutchins, one of the smaller mountains of the Kittery Range of the White Mountains group. No damage is reported.

The slide, started by a big boulder, cut a wide and lengthy trench in the side of the mountain that can be seen for miles.

Boston Man

Mayor Curley yesterday rewarded John J. Sullivan of 18 Vinton st., South Boston, for the part he took in recovering bodies at the Pickwick Club disaster, July 4, by decorating him with a gold medal with his name inscribed in large letters.

Sullivan, known to intimates as "Broadway," worked day and night directing the work in the recovering bodies of 45 victims, and was highly commended by officials of the nation, State and city.

So much praise was showered on Sullivan at the time that Mayor Curley created for him the office of building wrecker supervisor for the city.

BEITON ACTS IN THEFT OF BAR EXAM. PAPERS

Starts State Machinery of Justice—Against Two Alleged to Be Lawyers

SEEKS TO SAVE INNOCENT

Investigation Started When Applicant Boasted to Policeman of Having Questions

Attorney-General Beiton launched the prosecuting power of the State yesterday against two men, said to be attorneys, who stole bar examination papers, last June, and sold them to applicants for $15,000.

The Attorney-General acted to save the innocent applicants of the 119 who successfully passed the examinations.

After a long conference of the Board of Bar Examiners yesterday, Chairman Bailey announced it had not yet been decided whether it will ask the 119 to take another examination.

Mr. Bailey said the investigation was begun when Charles S. Hill of the character committee of the Boston Bar Association was informed that an applicant had boasted to a policeman that he was sure of his success in the examinations because of advance information he had as to what the questions were to be.

Mr. Bailey further said he is daily receiving letters to which he would not ordinarily give much attention. The charges are so serious, however, that he and his committee are carefully investigating them all.

DEMANDS CAPE COD
BEACH FOR PUBLIC

Mrs. Theodore W. Stevens of New York has petitioned Judge Davis in the Land Court in Boston to have her property registered, as extending from the middle of a road in Orleans and Truro to the high water mark. A hearing was held Friday, but additional matter will be laid before the court on November 6.

Mrs. Stevens' petition is opposed by R. B. Hanson of Buzzards Bay, who maintains the beach should be reserved for the public and not for individuals.

DORCHESTER GIRL TO WED EX-CTOR

The engagement of Miss Virginia Goffrey to Manuel Bush of Norwell, Dorchester, was announced yesterday. The marriage will take place some time in October. Miss Goffrey is the daughter of Walter A. Goffrey and a niece of Mrs. James McLeod. She has been with the Edison Company since she left school. She is a member of the Edison life-saving squad. Mr. Bush is the son of Fred Bush, and after a long engagement in the "House-Martin" Company is in business with his father.

BABY KILLED BY PIN IN WINDPIPE

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 26 (A. P.).
Baby Jane Schmitt, two and a half years old, died today after futile efforts to remove a safety pin from her windpipe. Her cousin, Edna Gelsberg, 11, it became known today, is in a critical condition after swallowing a five-cent piece.

The strange fate, which struck both children last night, baffling for her life at a hospital this afternoon. Her condition became complicated by paralysis which developed in her left leg and side this morning, four days after the sickness began.

CUPID LICENSE WORRIES HIM

If Clifford H. Wyman and Myrtle
C. Shonken are too married today it is because they had not made up their minds to go through with the ceremony of a late hour last night.
Miss Shonken is expected in Chicago tomorrow morning by the time the school bell rings to conduct her classes in one of the Chicago public schools. For that reason the couple were granted a license and a five-day notice of the law was granted by Judge Duff who heard their story yesterday in the Municipal Court.

Wyman, who gave his age as 27, comes from Omaha, and is a sales manager in Boston. Miss Shonken is about 25 years old, a school teacher and a resident at 313 Woodlawn st., Chicago, where she was born.

On being presented with the marriage license, Wyman asked what he should do with it. He was told to give it to the person who married them. Maybe the women got it.

FRENCH ENVOYS TO REJECT NEW U. S. DEBT PLAN

Anniversary of Argonne Battle Forgotten as Parley Hits Snag

By GEORGE R. HOLMES.
International News Service Correspondent.

Washington, Sept. 26.—Seven years ago under the prayerful eyes of all France the Americans began their supreme offensive in the Meuse-Argonne, which was the beginning of the end of a war that France had almost despaired of winning.

It is coincidence, perhaps, that the seventh anniversary of that great historical event today should find French and American statesmen, figuratively at least, sitting around a table at loggeryheads over the collection of some of the billions of dollars that America poured into that titanic struggle to aid France in her hour of need.

The anniversary of the Argonne offensive, which cost America 115,219 casualties, passed almost unnoticed among the debt envoys of the two governments, as they wrestled with figures, statistics and the hard facts of economic and fiscal analysis.

Negotiations between the two debt commissions were temporarily at a standstill today while both sides took counsel among themselves over their respective plans for funding the $4,000,000,000 that France owes the United States.

The French under Francis Caillaux, their versatile minister of finance, remained secluded at the embassy, pouring over the settlement plan advanced by the American commission which would grant them somewhat more lenient terms than the Great Britain and seven other debtor nations already have accepted.

It had been expected there would

Caillaux Terms Unacceptable, Declares Marin

Paris, Sept. 26.

"I do not believe the French Parliament will ratify the Washington debt settlement if the terms of the Caillaux offer, as published in the newspapers, are correct," said Louis Marin.

"Caillaux offers, according to the newspapers, is infinitely higher than France's capacity to pay. Nevertheless, the United States rejected it. If Caillaux accepts anything but the American proposal, it will be absurd and futile."

Marin warned Americans they should not forget the reality of the French Parliament's ratifying the debt settlement.

be a joint conference today at which M. Caillaux would give his answer to the American proposition, but he decided he needed more time to digest its provisions and the joint meeting therefore went over until Monday.

M. Caillaux has already decided, it was said in French quarters today, to reject the American proposal in its present form.

French See Long Debt Negotiations

Paris, Sept. 26.—France is not disapproving over the American rejection of M. Caillaux's first proposal for settlement of the French debt to the United States, if public opinion is reflected in newspaper comment.

The newspapers in general expected the rejection of the first proposal to be the prelude of the negotiations.

DALE PRAISES HEARST PAPERS FOR DEBT FIGHT

Vermont Senator Declares They Deserve Commendation for Insisting France Pay Up

By PORTER H. DALE
U. S. Senator from Vermont

Washington, Sept. 26.—The newspapers operated by William H. Hearst deserve commendation for insisting that the French debt to the United States be settled on terms approximating those made by the United States with Great Britain.

It would not be fair to the people of Great Britain to discriminate against them in their settlement with France, as they were associated with us in the World War the same as France.

The terms made with Great Britain were quite liberal. They took into consideration our fighting in a common cause, as due allowance was made for that in scaling the original interest rate.

Since the American Debt-Pending Commission has adopted the arrangement made with Great Britain as a model, and that policy has been approved by Congress, justice demands that similar terms be made with France.

Much has been said by France about the war having been fought on French soil, with France bearing the brunt of the attack. It may be said that when the American colonies fought for their independence, that war was fought on American soil.

France aided America in the War for Independence. She made loans to the colonies. It may also be observed that the interest rates on these loans were 4 and 5 per cent, and toward the end of payment by the United States they ranged from 4 1/2 to 6 1/2 per cent.

It might also be noted with propriety that, as a result of the World War, France obtained vast resources from Germany in territory rich in coal and productive capacity. The United States has not shared in the spoils of the war. We gave our full measure in turning the war to victory, but did not ask for any thing.

A WALL STREET WRITER means about "the weakness of United States steel company."

Yet that stock closed last night at $120 a share. A few years ago Frank A. Munsey was buying 100,000 shares of it at about $10 to $12 a share.

If Judge Gary lives twenty-five years more, and he ought to, he will, judging by his books, steel company will go a great deal higher than as high very likely, and he will still be making about the low prices.

But don't gamble in steel or any stock, buy only what you can pay for, put it away, and sleep well.

TO KNOW HOW the United States grows, especially United States finance, read this extract from a Wall Street report printed in New York ninety years ago:

"Several new banks have been reported in Albany. What nonsense! Give us a large bank—say one of fifty millions—to regulate the money market and checkmate Philadelphia."

New York has banks now with several times fifty millions each, and one bank with more than a THOUSAND MILLIONS. And "checkmating Philadelphia" isn't worrying New York.

Chicago has more than ten banks which could have bought all the Battle of Waterloo, put "Blackburne" in the middle of a property boom, could not have been dreamed of when Napoleon, using the tired French Revolutionists to make himself Emperor, was too busy to listen to the American Fulton, who thought he could run ships for steam.

MAID CHARGES DEFAMATION IN $100,000 SUIT

Katharine LaSalle Carpenter, Barrymore's Former Leading Woman, Is Defendant

New York, Sept. 26.—Katharine LaSalle Carpenter, former leading woman with John Barrymore in "Kick In," is being sued for $100,000 for slander by a former maid.

The maid, Mary Doyle Semenchuk, of Bedford, N. Y., says Mrs. Carpenter, who divorced Samuel E. Carpenter in Hingham, Conn., last October on the grounds of "intolerable cruelty" ruined her reputation and earning power.

The maid claims she was named by Mrs. Carpenter as being too friendly with the wealthy and aged husband of the former Broadway star.

The maid denies this emphatically, contending that her actions in the Carpenter home were above reproach and that Mrs. Carpenter, "accused by malice," indulged in "a wicked and malicious calumny" by insinuating undue familiarity.

BARRIED FROM JOBS

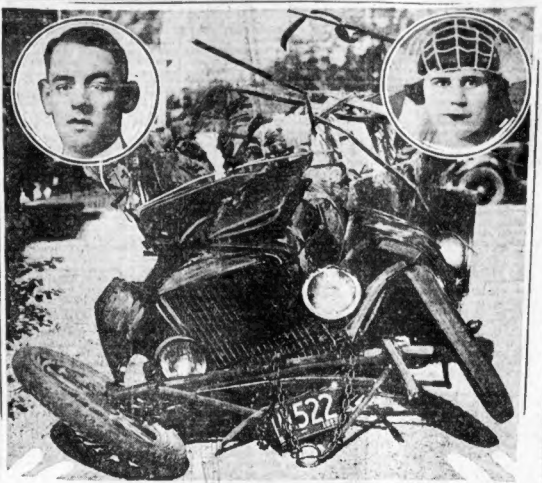

"As a result I cannot now find employment," says the maid, who asks $100,000 through her attorney, John M. Barrett, of No. 2 Rector street, Manhattan, who defended the aged Carpenter during the divorce trial.

The alleged insinuating remarks about the maid were not confined, she alleges, to the Carpenter home, but were repeated in Italy, France and England, and again in a bill of particulars filed in the Superior Court of Fairfield County, Ct., on the strength of which the stage star obtained her divorce and custody of her five-year-old child, Patricia.

"I communicated with Mr. Carpenter over his affection for this maid," stated Mrs. Carpenter in the bill of particulars, "and told him that I had been informed that Mary Doyle had a child. He became angry, called me 'an upstart and a new-comer to Ridgefield,' and put me out of his workshop."

"The affections continued," returning from Europe, I refused to go

TWO DIE, THIRD HURT IN CRASH

Mrs. Frances Walsh and William K. Price, both of No. 40 Wick 10th street, Mattapan, were instantly killed yesterday in an auto collision on the State road a mile from the centre of Norwood.

Mrs. William K. Price, wife of the dead man, is on the danger list at the Norwood hospital, three were passengers in Price's car. Mrs. Walsh was driving. The car was coming toward Boston and, according to the police, swung out of line into the path of a machine coming in the opposite direction. The latter car was operated by Henry Lund of Davis avenue, Norwood. Both machines were wrecked.

Lund was thrown clear of his car and escaped minor injuries.

Mary Pickford Gets Million from Husband

Los Angeles, Sept. 26.
FORTY parcels of Los Angeles real estate, valued at more than $1,000,000, were deeded today by Douglas Fairbanks, screen star, to his wife, Mary Pickford, and her mother, Charlotte Pickford Smith.

John Mott, attorney for Fairbanks, refused to disclose the nature of the transaction.

London, Sept. 26.—Hosiery stockings at $300 a pair are being sold in exclusive West End shops.

They are of silk so fine that a piece of it floats in the air like a lot of spider's web.

BABY HURLED OUT OF BUGGY BY AUTO

One-year-old Mary Sullivan narrowly escaped death yesterday and Patrick J. Connor, 26, is booked at the Charlestown police station for driving an automobile while intoxicated instead of being charged with manslaughter as he might have been.

The baby lay asleep in her carriage on the sidewalk in front of her home, 82 Pleasant street, Charlestown, when Connor's car crashed into the carriage, overturning it and hurling the child to the sidewalk. Pedestrians picked her up apparently unhurt. Mrs. Sullivan refused to allow the infant taken to a hospital and said she would call her own physician.

Connor, who lives in Charlestown, was turning into Boyle street from Pleasant when the accident occurred. The police claim he was drunk.

'LOST' PATROLMAN FOUND AT HOME

Worcester, Sept. 26.—John F. Finnegan, Worcester's missing patrolman, who was thought by brother policemen to have met with foul play, is safe.

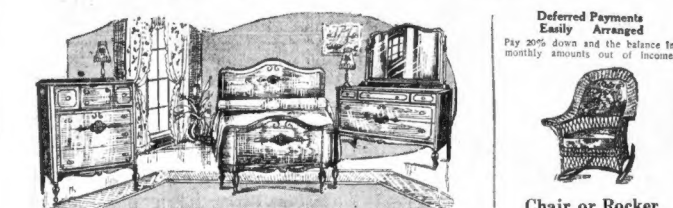

He was found at his home, 165 Belmont street, by Sergeant Thomas J. Keilher today. He explained his absence from Station 4, to which he was attached, by stating he was taken ill while patrolling his beat early yesterday morning.

BEATS DAUGHTER, 6, THROUGH RELIGION

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 26.—A beating 15 minutes each morning is the method of expressing her love for a 6-year-old daughter, according to the religious views of a woman on Sheridan beach here.

The mother beats the child each morning from 7 until 7:15, the police were told by neighbors of the family, who have heard the child screaming. The woman declared it is in accordance with her religion and she will not stop.

Mother Seeks School Post

"Put a mother on the Boston school committee." This is the slogan being used by the supporters of Mrs. Jennie Lottman Barron for the school committee.

Mrs. Barron is the mother of two children. Both of them are now in the public schools of this city. She has been a teacher for 11 years after being a school teacher.

"The time has arrived for mothers to extend their influence into the school committee," said Mrs. Barron. "What would better set forth the significance of motherhood than to have her influence felt upon the school board? We understand children from the best experience which can come to any one. I have been urged to run for this office and have consented."

YOM KIPPUR RITES TO OPEN AT SUNDOWN

Solemn Services of Atonement Draw Thousands to Synagogues

The Day of Atonement, Yom Kippur, will begin this evening at sundown and continue until sundown Monday. This is the most sacred day in the Jewish calendar, and involves almost universal observance. In addition to the day-long prayer at the synagogues, the Jews also observe a complete fast.

The ceremonial rites are celebrated this evening as well as tomorrow. The evening service is opened by the singing or the playing of Kol Nidre, the centuries-old song of the Jews. REMEMBER THE DEAD.

One special phase of the day is that a portion of the services that is devoted to the prayer for the dead. At Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue, tonight, there will be an organ rendition of Kol Nidre, accompanied by a quartet and choir. Rabbi Harry Levy will conduct the services. The theme of his sermon will be, "If We Could But See Ourselves." Tomorrow morning he will speak on "The Challenge."

The children's service will be held at 1 p. m., and the memorial service at 8 p. m. Rabbi Samuel Walk will conduct the service at Whitney Hall, which is devoted to the observance of Yom Kippur. Tonight Rabbi Walk will preach on "A New Spirit," and tomorrow morning on "What Price Judaism." The memorial service will be held here also at 3 o'clock.

SERVICES IN NEW TEMPLE. Temple Ohabei Shalom will conduct services at the temple on Union Park street and in the new Temple Centre, on Beacon street, Brookline. Tonight, Professor S. C. Cohen and A. Z. Ideleson of the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, will conduct the services at the centre. Services at the Temple will be led by Rabbi Samuel A. Abrams and Rev. E. W. Kovitch. They will exchange places for the services tomorrow morning.

Rabbi Louis M. Epstein, assisted by Custer Sprack, will conduct services at the Temple on Kettlewell street, Brookline. Rabbi Epstein will preach tonight on "Sacrifice" and tomorrow morning on "Natural and Unnatural Sin."

SLIGHTED, SPOILS ONE BEER PARTY

Gives Police Clue to 146 Quarts Hidden in Fall River Coal Bin

Fall River, Sept. 26.—Who tipped the police about thirteen cases of 146 quarts of beer stored in a coal bin on the municipal wharf, somebody did, and so the police got the stuff.

As a result of the raid, Frank W. Troop, caretaker of the dock, was arrested and charged with having manufactured beer. He was fined $75. According to the police the beer was to be used tomorrow at an outing of prominent citizens. The beer had been stored in the coal bin as a safe place to stow the contraband. Police understand a man who wasn't invited gave the clue.

BOY SCOUTS SWARM OVER OLD IRONSIDES

Nearly 700 Visit Constitution at Navy Yard; Received by Admiral De Steiguer

Nearly 700 Boy Scouts from Boston, Old Colony, Quincy, Springfield, Maiden, New Bedford, Needham, Worcester, and Lynn Councils in Massachusetts, and from Portland, Me., Woonsocket and Providence, R. I., and Hartford, Ct., went aboard the Constitution yesterday on their visit to the famous old frigate which carried Old Glory to victory in the days of long ago.

The Scouts had the time of their lives crawling over the 44 guns and climbing the rigging as far as the watchful eyes of the naval men would permit.

After calling on Governor Fuller at the State House, the boys marched to the navy yard, where Lieutenant-Commander Brandt met them at the gate with the Marine band.

The boys swarmed aboard the ship. Rear-Admiral Louis R. de Steiguer received them and introduced them to the Governor, who was aboard. Governor Fuller addressed the boys, giving them the greetings of the Commonwealth.

James J. Starrow, president of the National Boy Scout Council, asked the boys to help Admiral de Steiguer in the campaign to raise funds to save "Old Ironsides," especially as the admiral's soon to leave Boston. Among those receiving the boys were Captain Yancy Williams, commander of the yard, and William J. Dwyer, one of the crew of the Constitution on her last voyage.

SOUTH SENDING

35 TO BOSTON

Boston is one of the New England cities to be visited by a party of about thirty-five business men from Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina, from Sunday, Oct. 11 to Monday, Oct. 19.

The party is coming as the invited guests of New England members of the New England-Virginia-Interstate Committee, and of a large number of co-operating business and industrial organizations in Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine.

The object of the visit is to further develop the relations created last fall as a result of a visit of a delegation of representative New Englanders to Virginia. The visit to Virginia led to the formation of the New England-Virginia-Interstate Committee. Clifford B. Anderson, president of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, is the chairman.

He object is the development of their mutual interests in co-operative commerce moving through Hampton Roads to and from New England ports and the Cape Cod Canal.

PARALYZED 8 YEARS, CURED AT A MISSION

Swansea Woman Amazes the Praying Throng as She Walks in Church

Fall River, Sept. 25.—Eight years ago, Maria Watts, a weaver in the Cornell mill, slipped and fell beside her loom.

She was unable to rise, and physicians and surgeons informed the family she was paralyzed, and would be unable to walk again. Today, Miss Watts, who is now 37 years old, walks about her home with only a slight difficulty, having regained the power of her limbs during a mission she attended at St. Michael's church in Swansea, and in the presence of a large congregation. For seven years she had been in plaster cast and leather jackets. These she has discarded.

Rev. Joseph Nadeau, an Oblate Father residing in Montreal, came to St. Michael's Church to conduct a mission. Miss Watts, whose father had removed to Swansea, begged her father to take her to the church with the other members of the family. She followed the mission exer-

Hundreds of Bostonians yesterday special the world's largest steamship in the Leviathan, now being overhauled in South Boston drydock. At the same time, thousands are expected today. Two inspection groups will be permitted to visit the ship. The first group, limited to 1000 holders of passes issued by the United States Coast Guard, will be permitted to visit the vessel between 10 and 12, and a second visiting period will be held this afternoon between 2 and 4. At the same time tomorrow 500 visitors will be allowed to view the ship. Children accompanied by adults who have secured passes may visit the steamer.

TOBACCO IN ITALY

Increase of Smoking Among Women

SATISFACTORY progress is revealed by the most recent statistics on the tobacco monopoly. The factories have increased since the war from 15 to 23. They employ over 24,000 workpeople, of whom the greater number are women. The national consumption of tobacco, especially in the form of cigarettes, has greatly increased since the war, owing partly to the fact that Italian women smoke much more than they did.

B. & M. PROMISES SERVICE BY BUS

Authority to discontinue six branch lines of sixty-three miles of trackage is sought by the Boston & Maine in a petition filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission. Motor vehicles are blamed.

The Boston & Maine Transportation Company, says the petition, will arrange to establish service with motor buses and motor trucks, "where any additional service is warranted."

The lines sought to be abandoned comprised: complete Reformatory Branch, from Bedford to North Berwick, seven miles; Essex Branch, six miles; Ashburnham Branch, three miles, all in Massachusetts; Kennepunket Branch, five miles, in Maine and Rochester to Lakeport, thirty-five miles in New Hampshire.

at the Boston Art Club and her evenings perfecting the art of championship swimming, for which she has taken several prizes. "And the rest of the time," she says, "I devote to pleasure."

PAID HER WAY.

Miss Hawley, who is eighteen, vivacious, brown-eyed and affable, is paying her way through art school and for special instructors by selling her unique statuettes and landscapes and by waiting on tables.

"I model with a heavy paste of salt, flour and water," said Miss Hawley, "and my only implements are a nail file and toothpicks. In modeling my statuettes I use the nail file for moulding and holding in place during the hardening process, the heavier features, such as eyes, nose and hair, etc., I use the toothpicks. In moulding flowers and plants I hold the petals and stems in place with the file and outline the veins with a toothpick."

"There is an advantage of modeling with salt and flour, instead of clay. Because of its nature it sticks to the wood or cardboard plaques I use for backgrounds. Also, it makes more natural Winter scenes."

"I am very proud of my Winter scenes. I first outline them in pencil on light wood or heavy cardboard. Then I fill in with the paste. After it has hardened, I tint the scene as I would a picture, using pale yellow for the moon and blue and gray for the sky and water. The salt crystals sparkling through the white flour give the snow a very real appearance."

"I make rose jars, too, and ornament the outside with American heavy roses. Each petal and stem stands out in bold relief."

Miss Hawley has taken several prizes in swimming contests. She gives one the impression of being slender and diminutive, but in reality is rather tall and well rounded. LIKE "MISS AMERICA."

"My proportions are exactly the same as those of 'Miss America,'" she said. "I found this out when I won my last swimming prize."

"You can't imagine how happy I am to have made good in so many swimming contests and my art work. I was considered the 'ugly duckling' of my family. My brothers and sisters, to tease me, used to say, 'If I had your face, I'd drown myself.' Instead of doing this, I determined to show them I could make good somehow, so I originated a method of modelling and perfected myself in diving and fancy swimming."

"It should encourage other 'ugly ducklings.' Many don't believe it, but every duck can be made a beauty."

NOTORIOUS FORGER HANGS SELF IN JAIL

Montreal, Sept. 25.—John Hunter, notorious international forger with several aliases and prison records in London, Paris, Antwerp and other cities in Europe and America, hanged himself in his cell in Bow street station.

Hunter, widely known as Myer, was said to have been connected with Duncan Roberts, 37-year-old leader of the "Kite Mob" gang, who was last week sentenced in London, Eng., to long imprisonment.
